- The net rent takes into account all the yearly expenses for public taxes (IMU/TASI).
- The majority of the lease contracts will expire within 3 years. Once expired, the properties could be leased to new market conditions, exploiting the higher rents that will characterize the market. The rental level has been positive in the last few years and the rents will perhaps keep rising. The flexibility and early expiration of the lease contracts is a great opportunity to adapt the returns to the market.
- The CAPEX carried by the landlord include renovation and furnishing expenses. The current capital expenditures aim to keep each unit in an excellent state of maintenance.
- The Net Yield is 3.9% of the total investment, including the purchase price and the CAPEX for renovation and furnishing.
- On average, since 2001 every year 4 units have been purchased.
